

Observations of Patrick/Patricia Danvers

Occam's Razor: Among competing hypotheses, the one with the fewest assumptions should be selected.

Sherlock Holmes, as written by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, stated: “Once you eliminate the impossible, whatever remains, no matter how improbable, must be the truth.” Perhaps it’s time to expand the definition of “possible.”

❶ The Professor states the spider infestation in humans is “impossible.” However, they are clearly real.

❷ If Meyers molested Trisha Ortiz, there is a clear motive. Could Mary Witherspoon be involved? When did all these events occur?

❸ “As the Mother spins,
The bridge grows near completion,
And on that glorious day,
She and Her Daughters shall be free to walk the earth.”

This is clearly a chant of some sort. Is Daughters of Hope a cult? What are their beliefs? Why are they all female?

❹ Susan’s exceptionally sharp teeth are hollow but quite strong, and she has sacs of venom which feed into her teeth. Is this “impossible?” Clearly not. What is it then? Genetic abnormality seems like a stretch. The doctors said nothing about significant surgical alteration. These women are clearly bound by some religious belief. Should we consider that perhaps magic is real?

❺ Katrell Harris expressed concerns regarding the Daughters of Hope to Detective Miller. He then promptly died horribly, and it involved an enormous number of black widow bites. How does this tie-in?